

Dealing with Debt – A Guide for Customers

How you can get help?

We are here to help you run your finances smoothly in a complicated world. You can get help in good and bad times. We understand that you can face unexpected changes in your circumstances, for example if you become ill or lose your job, and these can upset your financial plans and your ability to pay back any money you have borrowed.

You may find yourself in financial difficulties if your lifestyle changes and your disposable income (the difference between your income and essential spending) falls, due to circumstances such as:

- loss of employment
- disability
- serious illness
- relationship breakdown
- death of a partner
- parental/carer leave
- starting a lower paid job
- imprisonment

You may be facing financial difficulties if you start experiencing one or more of the following:

- your payments (such as cheques, direct debits and standing orders) are repeatedly being paid despite a lack of funds resulting in an unarranged overdrawn balance and are incurring charges as a result of this
- you cannot keep up with your loan repayments or other commitments
- you repeatedly exceed your credit card or overdraft limit without agreement
- you make frequent cash withdrawals on a credit card
- you regularly request increased borrowing or repeatedly reschedule your debts
- you borrow more money to pay off existing debts
- you receive notice of insolvency or court proceedings

What can I do if I think I am getting into financial difficulties?

The more open and honest you are about the problem and its causes, the more we will be able to help you. This includes being honest with yourself – don't ignore post from people to whom you owe money.

If you do find yourself in difficulties, let us know as soon as you can. For example, when you know that your circumstances are going to change, get in touch with us. We will not usually be aware that your circumstances have changed until you tell us – and we will try to assist you if you are facing financial difficulties. Debt problems are easier to solve if you act early and ask for help.

You will need to work out a realistic budget and, if you haven't already done so, consider whether there are any ways of increasing your income or cutting back on non-essential spending. Different things will be important to different people. You could consider selling assets to reduce debts and help with repayments. You should also make sure that you are getting all the benefits to which you are entitled. A specialist money adviser can help.

Show your budget to us and try to agree a course of action with us. This might involve rescheduling repayments until you get back on your feet. Again, a specialist money adviser can help with this. If you are using a MoneyHelper, tell us so that we can allow you time to have discussions with them.

How do we deal with customers who are in financial difficulty?

If you are in genuine financial difficulty, it is in our interest, as well as yours, to find a solution.

Generally, we will want to do the following:

- Contact you if we think or become aware that you may be heading towards financial difficulties.
- Give you information about how you can avoid charges being applied to your account.
- Explain our approach to financial difficulties: i.e. that we will deal with you sympathetically and positively.
- Provide you with information on sources of free, independent money advice.
- Discuss the matter with you. We will be looking for information that will help us to identify the best course of action.
- Keep in touch. If you want us to deal with you in writing, email or over the phone, we will be happy to do so as long as you keep in touch.
- Give you clear information about the amount you owe.
- Develop a plan with you for clearing your debts in a way you can afford, with your help and co-operation. Such a plan may range from an informal arrangement to restructuring your debt so you can repay it over an extended period. We will give you written confirmation of what is agreed.
- Tell you beforehand about any action we may take, for example, going to court, and what extra charges you may have to pay if we do so.

How can we help you?

We will be sympathetic and positive when we consider any financial difficulties you may have. Our first step will be to try and contact you to discuss the matter. If you find yourself in financial difficulties, you should let us know as soon as possible. The sooner you discuss your problems, the easier it will be to find a solution. To help you take action quickly, we will tell you about where you can find further information about how to avoid incurring further charges and encourage you to contact us as soon as possible if you feel you are experiencing financial difficulties.

The more you tell us about your financial circumstances, the more we may be able to help. We will do all we can to help you overcome your difficulties. With your co-operation, we will develop a plan with you for dealing with your financial difficulties and we will confirm with you in writing what has been agreed.

We will try to come to the fairest solution. This will involve working out what assets you have available, working out what you need to repay and going through your income and spending in order to agree a reasonable plan for repaying the debt.

We treat each case individually and will not encourage you to commit or agree to a repayment arrangement which, from our knowledge of the situation, it is clear you cannot afford.

We can only make a decision about what you can reasonably afford to repay when we have a full picture of your financial circumstances. We will consider any reasonable offer of payment from you and you will be given every opportunity to agree satisfactory conditions for repaying your debt.

If you can make a satisfactory agreement with us about repaying your debt, it is important that you keep in touch with us throughout the repayment process, especially if your circumstances change.

Repayment plans with us may be subject to regular review. Any review period will be agreed with you or your adviser. You and/or your advisers should inform us if your personal situation changes.

If a satisfactory agreement cannot be reached, or an arrangement is agreed but you do not keep to it, we will ask you to make up the payments in full. If you do not do this, the account may be transferred to a specialist debt recovery department.

Who else can help?

You may want to talk to your family, friends or support agencies who may be able to help. Many people find it helpful to get advice from a specialist debt counsellor (usually called a money adviser).

You can get free, independent money advice from any of the following:

- Advice UK
 - Phone: 0300 777 0107
 - Website: www.adviceuk.org.uk
- Citizens Advice
 - You can get the phone number of your local bureau from the phone book, the local library or from the website: www.citizensadvice.org.uk
- Citizens Advice Scotland

- MoneyHelper

All of these are free, confidential, independent and reliable, we will work with any of them if you ask them to, but for confidentiality reasons, we cannot do so without your permission. So, the advice agency will ask you to sign a form giving us permission to discuss matters with them.

There are other organisations that do not charge consumers for debt advice. We will work with an adviser from an organisation not listed above, but, again, we will need your permission to do so.

Should I consider using a fee-charging debt management company?

You are probably aware that there are companies that charge a fee for managing your debts. You may have seen adverts for companies that handle debts on behalf of customers for a fee. However, their fees mean that you will be paying your debt for a longer period. It is your responsibility to check the fees that may be charged before asking these companies to act on your behalf. If you decide to use one of these companies, you should make sure that you read all of the small print and fully understand the terms of the agreement before you continue. It is worth asking yourself why you would want to pay an organisation for a service that you can get for free elsewhere.

How can a money adviser help?

If you have debts with many creditors, we would recommend a free Money advisor.

Money advisers will check whether you are eligible for any more benefits or tax relief, and make sure that you pay the most important debts first. You should tell the money adviser about any other issues or problems that may affect your finances.

How do I work out my priorities for repaying my debts?

Money advisers can help you work out and agree repayment plans with the people to whom you owe money, based on what you can afford after you have paid your living costs. Important costs will usually be your rent or mortgage, gas, electricity, and water bills, council tax, child support maintenance, income tax and VAT liability. Banking & Building Societies and money advisers have worked together to produce the Common Financial Statement, which should speed up getting your repayment plans agreed. Check that your adviser is using this statement where possible (or other similar statements, such as that used by the StepChange Debt Charity).

The adviser will work out what is left from your income after your essential spending and may suggest that you offer a 'pro-rata payment' to each person to whom you owe money. This means that you will divide your disposable income (the difference between your income and essential spending) fairly between the people you owe money to. It is then up to them whether they choose to accept your offer.

If your adviser is linked to the Paylink programme, they may be able to automatically distribute your payments to the people to whom you owe money. Ask your adviser for more details if you are interested.

What options are available to help me manage my debt problems?

There are a number of possible options that are available to help you manage your debt problems. These are the main options:

- Informally negotiated arrangement
- Offer in full and final settlement
- Reorganisation of finances or debt restructuring (sometimes also called 'debt consolidation' or a 'debt consolidation loan')
- Debt Management Plan
- Court Administration Order
- Individual Voluntary Arrangement (IVA) or Scottish Trust Deed
- Bankruptcy (or Sequestration in Scotland).

Each of these options can have different outcomes and affect you in different ways. You need to be aware of this when considering which option is likely to be suitable for you. If you find this difficult to do, remember to ask for help or seek advice from a specialist debt counsellor or money advisor.

Is bankruptcy a way out?

Applying for bankruptcy is very much a last resort, which is not recommended in most cases. You are likely to lose all your assets, including your home if you own one, and if you make yourself bankrupt, you will have to pay bankruptcy fees yourself. You should always get advice before you apply for bankruptcy.

What is the worst that can happen to me?

Debt won't go away on its own. If you miss instalments or ignore reminders, calls and letters, and if all attempts to agree an alternative arrangement or plan are unsuccessful, we may take legal action through the courts as a last resort.

If we decide to take legal action against you, your file will be sent to our solicitors for legal proceedings to be started. Even at this stage, solicitors are prepared to correspond with you or your adviser to agree a suitable solution.

If you are a home owner

None of the debt management options above can affect the rights of secured creditors, for example: a building society that has a mortgage or legal charge over your home. They continue to have the right to take possession of your home, if you don't keep up your repayments.

Your house or other goods could be repossessed but this will only happen if the debt is secured by the property or the goods and all other attempts to reach an alternative solution with you have failed. Your lender can ask a court to apply a charging order to your property, to recover the debt plus an interest on the debt. In basic terms, the unsecured debt becomes secured on your property and in some circumstances the lender can apply to a court to force the sale of your share of the property.

If you have to go to court, a money adviser can help you prepare your case and may be able to represent you.

How does debt affect my credit record?

All of the above debt management options may affect your credit rating and will in virtually all cases show up on your credit record. We give information to credit reference agencies in many instances (for example: overdrafts) as a matter of course, but report differently on personal debts you owe us if:

- you fall behind with your payments
- you do not dispute the amount owed, and
- you have not made satisfactory plans for repaying your debt, following a formal demand.

If we accept smaller repayments from you, we should tell you whether this is considered as 'falling behind with repayments' and whether this information will be passed to credit reference agencies.

If you don't reach an agreement with us or anyone to whom you owe money – and especially if you get a court judgment against you – the details will be passed to a credit reference agency.

In these cases, we will give you at least 28 days notice that we plan to give information about the debts you owe us to credit reference agencies. At the same time, we will explain the role of credit reference agencies to you and the effect the information they provide can have on your ability to get credit.

If you later try to borrow money, most lenders will check your record at the credit reference agency. If you have a bad credit record they are likely to turn you down. The longer a debt situation is left, the more damaging the record is likely to become.

If you ask us we will tell you how to get a copy of the information that credit reference agencies have about you, or how to obtain leaflets that explain how credit referencing works.

You can check what information credit reference agencies have about you by contacting the following organisations:

Equifax plc

www.equifax.co.uk/Products/credit/statutory-report

Experian Limited

www.experian.co.uk/consumer/statutory-report.html

Transunion (formerly Callcredit plc)

<https://www.transunion.co.uk/consumer/consumer-credit>

You will need to pay £2 and give your full first names, surname, date of birth, address including postcode and other addresses you have lived at during the last six years. Once you have cleared any debts, you may want to make sure that they have noted you have paid your debts.

Ten practical steps you can take to help resolve your debt problems.

These are some practical steps that you can take to help you resolve your debt problems:

1. Be honest with yourself and acknowledge the problem. Don't ignore post from people to whom you owe money.
2. Contact us to let us know if you think you might be getting into financial difficulties. Discuss the matter with us and ask how we can help.
3. Draw up a budget. Make a list of all your debts and prepare a statement of your financial position, detailing your income and expenditure and how much you owe.
4. Maximise your income. Decide on your priority financial commitments and maximise your income by cutting down on non-essential spending and claiming any benefits or tax relief for which you may be eligible.
5. Make an offer to us towards your debts. Review your financial statement to check what you can afford to pay towards your debts and make an offer to us towards clearing your debts.
6. If we accept your offer, make sure you stick to it.
7. Review your circumstances regularly and inform us about any changes.
8. If we do not accept your offer or you cannot stick to your original proposal because your circumstances have changed, speak to us and try to renegotiate. If you cannot reach an agreement, contact a specialist money adviser who can give you advice.
9. Consider other options to help you manage your debt problems. Again, a specialist money adviser should be able to help you with this.
10. If you have debts with many creditors, contact all creditors and let them know that you are facing financial difficulties, so that they are aware of the situation. Contact a free money advisor, who should be able to help you work out and agree repayment plans with the people to whom you owe money.
